The End of the Chevron Deference: Challenges and Opportunities for Public Pension Plans

In June 2024, the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Loper Bright Enterprises v. Raimondo ended four decades of Chevron deference—a doctrine that required courts hearing challenges to regulatory actions to defer to regulators' interpretations of ambiguous statutes. Loper Bright now requires courts to independently interpret statutory ambiguities using traditional tools of statutory construction, reducing the deference previously granted to administrative agencies. The session will review decisions issued in the wake of the Loper Bright decision and the regulated industries that have been impacted. This panel will discuss the challenges and opportunities for public pension plans as we navigate our path forward, using touchstone fiduciary and governance principles to guide our way through the uncertain post-Chevron landscape.

Session B: Navigating Tax Implications for Private Funds

As institutional investors increasingly allocate capital to private funds, understanding the complex tax considerations is more critical than ever. Panelists from internal and outside counsel will share their insights into the tax aspects of these investments, with an emphasis on dealing with issues in a proactive, practical, cost-effective manner. The discussion will cover early considerations, structure, negotiation, and navigating those often-perplexing subscription documents. We'll answer: How do I apply for US residency certificates, and Canadian and other exemption letters? What vehicle do I choose, and do I really want a Cayman blocker? What makes a good side letter template, and what should you fight for? What is a Luxembourg hybrid anyway?
